The Lindblad-National Ge

ULTIMATE POLAR EXPEDITION SHIPS

Our purpose-built polar ships set course for Antarctica's mythic expanse enveloped in the luxury of comfort and outfitted with all the tools for adventure. Top-tier Ice Class vessels, each embodies the expertise developed through our more than 55 years of pioneering polar exploration. Venture into channels and coves framed by towering icebergs. Watch whales play off the ship's bow. See penguin colonies stretching as far as the eye can see. Accommodating only 126 to 148 guests, our powerful yet intimately scaled vessels bring you directly—and safely—into the heart of earth's last great wilderness.

A VETERAN TEAM

Many of the experts on our staff are veteran polar guides who have worked with Lindblad for decades. Chosen for their extensive knowledge of natural history, polar exploration, and life and climate sciences, they're also keen-eyed spotters able to maximise opportunities to observe each region's incredible wildlife.

TAKE GREAT PHOTOS WITH THE PROS

From seabirds gliding gracefully alongside the ship to monumental mountains and glaciers and seemingly endless penguin colonies, Antarctica has no shortage of striking photo subjects.

On our expeditions, both a National Geographic photography expert and a Lindblad Expeditions-National Geographic certified photo instructor (CPI) are available to assist you with everything from camera settings to composition. Every guest—from iPhone camera users to advanced hobbyists—can stand side by side with top photographers, pick up tips in the field, and return home with the photos of a lifetime. With the onboard OM System Photo Gear Locker (formerly Olympus) you can field test new lenses, camera bodies, and more—free. Plus, ask about pre-voyage discounts and benefits.

EXCLUSIVE UNDERSEA PROGRAM

Our ships don't merely use the Southern Ocean as a highway, we explore it, and our Undersea Specialists are an integral part of that discovery. They dive the polar deep, or use Remotely Operated Vehicles (ROVs), to bring back images—often surprising and unexpectedly colourful—to enrich your understanding of Antarctica's dynamic land-and-sea ecosystem.

ACTIVELY EXPLORE EVERY DAY

Our Antarctic itineraries feature a range of activities designed to immerse you in the splendours of the White Continent. Whether you choose to kayak among bergy bits, hike up a ridge to a vista overlooking a secluded cove, or take a short stroll along the shore where penguins are gathered, you will be able to explore your way, each day. Activities are always included in the voyage price.

DEVELOPING YOUNG EXPLORERS

The National Geographic Global Explorers Program is an educational adventure for explorers under 18 travelling on Journey To Antarctica: The White Continent. Our onboard field educators create engaging activities, like earning a Zodiac licence or identifying constellations, using nature as the classroom. Get more out of exploring by connecting with the world in new and intriguing ways. See page 22.

The seventh continent is a kingdom of ice and snow bewildering in its beauty, an untamed place where we can witness nature's eternal power.

What to Expect: Crossing

By Ian Strachan

The Drake Passage—the powerful body of water connecting Cape Horn to the South Shetland Islands—is both the gate and gatekeeper for those heading to Antarctica via expedition ship. Naturalist and Certified Photo Instructor Ian Strachan is a frequent traveller to the White Continent. Armed with his many successful passages—both eerily placid and equally turbulent—Strachan prepares us for our voyage across these legendary waters to the bottom of the world.

What is the Drake Passage? Where is it?

To reach Antarctica you must cross the Southern Ocean that surrounds it. The shortest route to the frozen continent is from Tierra del Fuego, at the tip of South America, to the Antarctica Peninsula. This approximately 800 kilometre “gap” between the two continents was created 50-35 million years ago by the small-but-tectonically-formidable Scotia Plate emerging from what we now call the Andes Mountain range.

Why is it called Drake’s Passage?

This body of water is named for famed privateer, slave trader, pirate, and explorer Sir Francis Drake. The name is ill-fitting, as Drake did not see the area nor cross it—sticking to calmer waters in the Strait of Magellan.

Why is (or why can) the Drake Passage (be) so rough?

Unfettered by any interposing landmass, winds and currents swirl in an endless surge of raw power around Antarctica. You may have heard the nautical phrase the “roaring forties” which alludes to the strong prevailing winds found at 40 degrees latitude. Antarctica is defined as land below 60 degrees latitude, which sailors called “the screaming sixties.” Storm systems whip up a building sea state that can reach 10 metres in height, conditions

the Drake Passage

which would have been impossible to safely navigate 100 years ago.

Is it safe to cross the Drake Passage?

Short answer, yes. A slightly longer answer is yes, but it is good to be aware of your own limitations. The ships are resilient and designed for heavy seas, they will be just fine. Handrails, sea sickness medication, as well as an experienced and helpful crew are all constants on board that can help mitigate any discomfort.

How long does it take to cross and what can travellers expect on a crossing?

The voyage across takes approximately two full days. It would be a mistake to view this time simply as transit, however, as on any crossing one can see a multitude of seabirds using the winds to stay aloft for days without having to flap. Various species of whales feed in this stretch of water as well. Naturalists will be keeping a keen eye out from the Bridge for fin whales in particular.

At what point in an expedition to Antarctica does a ship cross the Drake Passage?

Crossing the Drake Passage is the first step of an expedition, and a logistically minded reader will realize that every (successful) voyage to Antarctica entails a return trip on the tail end. Whether you are gleefully turning your face to the wind or monitoring the horizon from the comfort of your cabin, your crossing through these legendary waters (both directions) will be an essential part of the experience of Antarctica—memorable and worthwhile in its own right.

Penguins of the Southern Ocean

From gentoo to chinstrap, Adélie to emperor, penguins are Antarctica's most popular residents and the main draw for travellers to the seventh continent. And for good reason: these iconic birds are endlessly fascinating to watch in the wild. During austral summer, experience the magic of hundreds of penguins parading before us—a magnificent sight to behold. Prepare for your own close-up encounter with the often-madcap business of penguin life with this map of the striking species awaiting your arrival.

AREA ENLARGED

DRAKE PASSAGE

South Shetland Islands

SOUTH SHETLAND ISLANDS CHINSTRAP PENGUINS

Easily told by the black feathers on the chin, chinstrap penguins nest in massive colonies and are quite aggressive with one another. Feeding exclusively on krill on the Antarctic Peninsula, their numbers have declined dramatically.

W. PENINSULA, S. SHETLANDS, N.W. WEDDELL SEA, FALKLANDS GENTOO PENGUINS

With a mixed diet of krill and fish, gentoo penguins are opportunistic feeders with an expanding range on the Antarctic Peninsula. A large white patch above the eye and bright orange-red beak easily identify this widespread penguin.

Falklands

TIERRA DEL FUEGO & W. FALKLANDS
ROCKHOPPER PENGUINS

Rockhopper penguins are well named as they perform amazing hopping climbs to reach their breeding locations. Even though they have serious attitude and can be quite aggressive to competitors and predators, they can be incredibly gentle with their mates, performing delicate mutual preening.

South Georgia

SOUTH GEORGIA
MACARONI PENGUINS

Named after 18th-century English “dandies” who took on the hair fashions of the Italians, macaroni penguins have stunning golden plumes above their eyes. Numbering over one million breeding pairs at South Georgia, they nest on steep hillsides that are nearly inaccessible to us, usually in areas with crashing waves.

SOUTH GEORGIA
KING PENGUINS

Second largest of all penguins, king penguins breed in massive colonies around the island, several of which contain more than 100,000 breeding pairs! With a breeding cycle lasting 14 months or more, a visit to a colony any time of the season could result in eggs, chicks, and the incredible “Oakum boys.”

WEDDELL SEA

N.W. WEDDELL SEA
ADÉLIE PENGUINS

With its crisp black and white plumage and distinct white eye ring, the Adélie penguin is the classic looking “tuxedo” penguin. This is a truly Antarctic species, breeding farther south than any other penguin.

Snow Hill Island

WEDDELL SEA & SNOW HILL ISLAND
EMPEROR PENGUINS

The tallest and heaviest of all penguins, the emperor penguin can only be found in Antarctica. Nesting in colonies on sea ice during the Antarctic winter, we search for this holy grail bird on ice flows when conditions allow.
